

Crate Training

For Cats

Most cat owners don't think to acclimate their cats to their crate for travel. When we only introduce our cats to their crate once a year, most likely to the vet clinic or groomer, they then relate their crate too scary or a stressful event.

This is usually where the stress, fear and anxiety escalates before they even get to their destination. Take a few simple steps to reintroduce your cats to their crate so they can travel more relaxed. This routine can easily make their crate a safe and comfortable zone.

Step 1: Start by introducing your cat to the bottom half of their carrier. Have the bottom half in their normal sleeping spot.

Step 2: Start by feeding your cat in their carrier with no door, regularly.

Step 3: Reward your cat every time they voluntarily go into the crate
